They say there is no alternative. But the cuts are political not financial.

They come from "An ideology that loves privatisation. An ideology that sees public service employment - millions of people caring and helping and educating - not as an achievement to be celebrated - but as a problem to be tackled", Dave Prentis, UNISON General Secretary

We say the only way to build out of the recession - for both public and private sector - is to promote growth and ensure fairness through creating jobs and protecting services, through fair taxation and a living wage.
